1. The two buildings for the secret Zeleznik Radio Station of the Kontra Obavjestajna Sluzba -(Counter-Intelligence Service; KOS) near Belgrade, were reportedly completed in August 1950. The buildings which are connected by two underground electric cables 22 centimeters in diameter, are described as follows:
 - a. A one-story building, 10 meters long by 6 1/2 meters wide, near the sawmill in Makis. The purpose of this building is to serve as the power plant for the radio transmitter.
 - b. A two-story building, 20 meters long by 20 meters wide, located near the village of Zarkovo, and approximately 1,000 meters from Mount Kosutnjak. This building which is located at a distance of 4 1/2 meters south of the building in Makis is to serve as the headquarters of the radio transmitter.
2. A large generator was reportedly installed in the building in Makis in August 1950. At the same time, numerous cases containing machinery arrived in Zarkovo. Forty military trucks were likewise seen in August at a review in Belgrade, carrying the radio transmitters destined for this station. Following the review, the transmitters were taken to Zarkovo.
3. Plans for the buildings for the Zeleznik Radio Station were drawn by Engineer Miskovic who is allegedly responsible for the planning of all KOS and UDB buildings. Construction of the buildings was carried out by political prisoners under the supervision of a certain Engineer Zivkovic, who was also a political prisoner.
